Why Meraki HDPC Clads Are Superior to Local Market Clads

Meraki Interiors is a trusted manufacturer of premium louvers and cladding solutions. Meraki HDPC (High-Density Polymer Composite) clads are engineered to deliver superior durability, safety, and aesthetics when compared to conventional local market cladding materials. Below is a professional comparison highlighting the key advantages of Meraki HDPC clads.

Feature	Meraki HDPC Clads	Local Market Clads
Material Composition	High-Density Polymer Composite manufactured under strict quality control for consistent performance.	Usually made from PVC, wood-based panels, or mixed composites with inconsistent quality.
Water & Moisture Resistance	Completely waterproof and unaffected by humidity or damp conditions.	May absorb moisture, leading to swelling or surface damage.
Termite & Borer Resistance	100% termite-proof and borer-proof.	Often susceptible unless chemically treated.
Fire Safety	Fire-retardant properties enhance overall safety.	Generally lacks certified fire-retardant properties.
Dimensional Stability	Minimal expansion or contraction over time.	Prone to expansion, contraction, or warping.
Durability & Lifespan	Long-lasting and suitable for high-traffic commercial areas.	Shorter lifespan and inconsistent durability.
Maintenance	Low maintenance and easy to clean.	May require frequent repairs or replacement.
Finish & Appearance	Premium, uniform finish with modern designs.	Uneven finish and limited design consistency.
Installation	Standardized dimensions ensure easy and clean installation.	Irregular sizes may increase installation effort.

Conclusion

Meraki HDPC clads offer a superior combination of strength, safety, visual appeal, and long-term value. While local market clads may appear economical initially, they often result in higher maintenance costs and reduced lifespan. Choosing Meraki HDPC clads ensures a reliable, premium, and future-ready cladding solution for modern interior spaces.
